WRITERS FOR "THE RIPLEY ADVERTISER,"

The White Rose

— or —

MEMPHIS. —

BY W. C. FALKNER,

CHAPTER XL.

[CONCLUDED.]

Three years after the "White Rose of Memphis" had accomplished her memorable pleasure trip, two elegantly dressed ladies were leisurely strolling along the graveled walks in Court Square, Memphis, Tennessee, engaged in an earnest conversation, while two mulatto girls were pushing a couple of silver-mounted baby carriages along just behind the two ladies. Each one of the handsome vehicles contained a very small specimen of sleeping humanity, richly attired in expensive and stylish clothes.

One of the children, a bright, blue-eyed boy, about two years old, with braided brown curly hair, woke up, and when he saw a large number of pretty pet-squirrels hopping about near his carriage, he became greatly excited. Hurriedly clambering down out of the carriage, he hastened to where the little girl lay soundly sleeping, and tried to wake her.

"Det up, O Up," said he as he began to tug at her gown; "see pretty pet."

The little girl did not respond, for she was sleeping very soundly; but he was determined to wake her up. When he found that he could not accomplish his object by gentle means, he resorted to that of a more vigorous nature. Seizing her left ear between finger and thumb, he gave it a violent twist that caused the little sleeper to start up with a loud scream.

"You Harry!" exclaimed one of the ladies as she hurried toward the carriage; "what on earth have you been doing to Lottie?"

She then lifted the little girl out of the carriage and placed her on the ground.

The little boy made no answer, but went dashing after one of the squirrels, and the little girl soon joined in the chase, and their joyful shouts rung out on the air.

"Ah, ha, here we come!" exclaimed Doctor Dodson, as he came rapidly across the park; and seizing the little boy, he tossed him up and down a dozen times. Ah, ha, lottie, this boy is the very image of his mother, don't you see, yes, that is Viola's nose to a T."

"Where did you leave Harry and Eddie, Doctor?" and then said Wallingford.

"Ah, ha, yes, they went by the post office and made me wait for them here, under the sun now. Ah, Eddie, old boy, it took you a long time to go to the post office."

"We were detained at Mr. Rockland's office," replied Wallingford.

"Yes," said Harry, "that is true, Doctor, and here is a present of letters for you; and here, Lottie, is one for you."

"Oh! Viola, this is from Scottie. I know her hand."

"Read it," said Viola, "I am anxious to know what she has to say."

Lottie tore off the envelope hurriedly and read as follows:

"Jackson, Miss., July 15.

"Dear Lottie: I received your dear letter yesterday, and I mean to reply. I am too happy to write a long letter. I suppose at last I come reconciled with Ralleigh, and has given his consent to our marriage, which is to be solemnized next Thursday. Ralleigh is such a dear, good old fellow, and I do believe he loves me with all his heart. My dear, good old papa did not like Ralleigh at first, but he has gotten over his prejudice, and now they are the best of friends. Ralleigh has quit politics, and is doing well at the law; and, oh! Lottie, how I do love him. I know we shall be very happy, for I have got my temper completely subdued, and I intend to make him a good devoted wife. Ralleigh told me that your daughter was the prettiest little darling in the world. I am glad you named it Lottie, because you know how I adore that sweet name. Ralleigh says that Viola's boy is the very image of his mother; he also tells me that Viola and Harry were the happiest couple he had ever seen, except you and Eddie. Well, I am delighted to hear it. If ever people deserved to be happy, you and Viola do; because you have suffered more than your share. I think your husband is one of the noblest specimens of humanity I ever saw. This is saying a great deal, but I mean it, and Ralleigh agrees with me.

"I must tell you what a pretty joke was put upon me by the Rev. U. K. Marshall, a celebrated minister of Vicksburg. He has been holding a series of meetings here, and was a frequent visitor at our house. He is an eloquent orator, and much admired, and beloved by all who know him. My darling old papa is a member of his church, and would swim a river any time to hear him preach. When Mr. Marshall was about to start for home, he invited me to accompany him. 'If you will go with me,' he said, 'I will insure you to hear one of the most eloquent sermons that you ever listened to from a mere boy, who has lately been licensed to preach.' Of course I went, as my curiosity was aroused; and Mr. Marshall took me to church the same night we arrived at Vicksburg. Now, I had neglected to ask the name of the boy-preacher, so intent was I engaged in drawing his picture in my mind. The church was a very large one, and when Mr. Marshall led me in, the house was crowded; but he succeeded in securing me a seat in one corner, some distance

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed, while to brassy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Unconsciousness of the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the lassitude and disease peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which condition diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

An A Dressing for Ladies' Hair.
The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
